ACCOUNT REPORT

1. Executive Summary

Routine accounting and financial activities were carried out during the week, including cash management, sales and delivery documentation, customer payment follow-ups, and monitoring of statutory obligations.

2. Bank Position & Cash Management

Daily bank balance reports were prepared and submitted to the Managing Director daily. This provided Management with timely visibility of the Company's cash position and supported effective financial planning and decision-making.

3. Sales, Delivery & Invoicing

- Prepared and issued delivery notes for dispatched orders.
- Followed up on outstanding customer payments.
- Processed, recorded and properly filed sales and delivery documents.
- Ensured compliance with accounting policies and internal controls.

4. Customer & Receivables Review

Customer collections were generally satisfactory. However, outstanding UBA receivables, particularly personalization invoices remain pending and require continuous follow-up.

5. Observations & Recommendations

A review of selected customer accounts was conducted to assess recent sales activities and identify customers requiring additional engagement. Sales from some customers have declined significantly, while some customers with whom the Company previously conducted business have not placed recent orders. This indicates a need for more deliberate and continuous customer relationship management.

At present, most customer interactions appear to be centered around specific requests, transactions or ongoing business activities. While these interactions are necessary, maintaining communication only when there is an active business need may gradually weaken the relationship with customers. But if we develop and maintain a comprehensive email list comprising existing customers, prospective customers, previous customers, and other relevant contacts who have interacted with Cardstel.

Periodic newsletters and promotional communications can then be sent to these contacts. These communications do not necessarily have to be direct sales requests; they can include company updates, product and service information, promotional offers, industry-related information, and other cordial communications that help maintain the relationship.

Consistent communication will help keep Cardstel's products and services in the minds of customers and prospects and increase the likelihood of the Company being considered when future business opportunities arise.

Furthermore, most existing business relationships are often maintained through specific individuals within customer organisations. Where such an individual leaves the organisation or changes roles and no immediate replacement relationship is established, the Company may gradually lose contact and consequently, the associated business.

A structured customer communication system supported by a centralized database rather than relying solely on individual contacts would help reduce this risk. Regular newsletters and promotional emails would also provide an indirect but consistent means of keeping the Cardstel brand visible to customers and prospects.

The CRM platform is not yet fully utilised for delivery operations, as job IDs are still being sent manually to Accounts. Full implementation will help automate delivery notes, reduce paperwork, improve efficiency, and strengthen document tracking and departmental coordination.

7. Key Tasks for the Coming Week

- Follow up on overdue customer payments especially outstanding personalization invoices.
- Continue daily routine accounting activities.
- Follow up on improved CRM utilisation for delivery operations.
